“ I thought I had life figured out and then this happens. It seems so senseless. It takes my breath away when I think about it. It takes the wind out of my sails. It makes me turn to God with a bewildered look and a defeated stance.

Andy was my best friend and happened to be my first cousin. I've come to realize he was even more than that. He was a part of me and that part made me a stronger man. Losing him makes me feel incomplete. I only hope he knew how much I loved him.

I used to think Andy had one fault: he could not say "no." If someone needed him, he was there. I can't count the number of times he was there for me. I thought he was giving away too much of himself. One fault . . . I was such a fool. Helping others, isn't that what life is all about?

As I contemplate life going forward, I must come to terms with the loss. I've decided I can honor Andy's life by being more like him. I'm not certain I can reach his level of magnanimity, but it will give me peace as I try. He'll always be with me as long as I try.

“ Andy, "Papa" was a wonderful and caring man and friend. My grandson, Ashden, called him Papa. Ashden traveled across the county with Andy and Angie when he was a toddler. He called Papa's truck a boomba. He loved Andy so much and we did too. He was always full of laughter and smiling. He loved to set around a campfire and cooking on the grill. We will miss him dearly but we know he is walking with the Lord in heaven. We love you Papa so much.

Andy, it has been many years since I have seen you, but I know you were an awesome friend back in the day. You were one of the "good guys". I was so shocked when Larry texted me just now and told me about your accident. I am hurting in one way, but I do know you have gained your angel wings and are flying high up there in heaven now with our Lord Jesus. He must have something he needs you to be doing for him up there in heaven now because he brought you home. You were loved by many and will be missed badly. I do know that you will still be with each one in spirit. Please be sure to let each one know that you are still with them. Please give them signs. Especially Larry-he is a difficult one and you were his best friend. Rest In Peace Brother! 🙏🙏🙏. Cathy
