“ I believe that in life their are some people that God choose to be his special choosen children well in my eyes Ashley was one of those choosen. If you really knew Ashley you knew that she had a buietiful soal. Ashley was so pretty and could have been a beauty queen but insted God choose her to have an impact in certain peoples life. Myself being one of those people. I was prevledged to be able to have days with her where we shed tears about our lifes and tell our deepest hurts and beleifs. And we had days where all we did was crack jokes to each other and, (nevermind you hers were by far the funnest). I think it was her facial exspections when she would crack a joke or seem air headed. She was by far airheaded. She cared deeply about the people she loved and wanted good things for them. Ashley always wanted good for me. I just want to say that if I had last words to say to her I would tell her thank her. And tell her that I finally have good things in my life and good people. That I will never forget the day that she asked me " At what point did I stop careing Aabout myself"? For some reason that day and that question always stuck out to me because when she said it she said it with tears in her eyes and a geniun care in her heart. Well Ashley 2 years ago the Lord delivered me from all that bottled up mess and im finally ok. I love you Ashley and you will never be forgotten and I was blessed for our days together. and that one question because it has always been with me while fighting this thikng we call life.

“ Ashley was always such a sweet and polite young girl. When she was staying at our house with Courtney she was always laughing and and having a good time. We took her and Courtney to Disney World when they were about 12 or 13 and she was constantly thanking us for the trip. My prayers now are for her precious babies and her wonderful grandparents. Mr. & Mrs. Johnson please know my heart breaks for you two right now. May God give you peace and comfort.

“ To Ashley's family:

I worked with Ashley for several years at Ansercall, she was a very sweet person. I still have a couple of gifts that she gave me for Christmas one year. My family passed my grandson's baby bed and other items down to her when she was expecting Skye. We are all so sorry to hear of her passing. May God provide comfort to you all.
