“ My first Apple product was the Powermac G5, it was the dual 2GHz version, most powerful they had at the time. I spent 6000usd on the setup and had got it for college at the time. That was back in october of 2003. Now, 8 years later, I am still using that machine, granted I have upgraded parts of it, but its still my main machine. I also have 4 other macs as well now, an iPod touch, iPhone4, and the iPad2. Steve Jobs was a part of all of the products and knew exactly how he wanted them to look, function, and survive through out time. He will be remembered for a long time, probably much longer than we will live. Ruby recently posted..
