“ For my beloved bother-in-law . Life on earth won't be the same knowing your not here . The memories....

That I couldn't marry anyone unless they could smoke a picayune cigarette and you would say New or Lee Owns

First time I had boiled peanuts but the best was hog chittlings , which if we had a mess would may have healed us

First and only time I shot my 38 pistol on your farm

All the things you taught me ...you full of laughter, compassion, and big heart

Seems just yesterday we were riding the dusty gravel road to visit Aunt Nancy and Uncle Jerry. I don't recall how old I was then. Those Days Uncle Jerry was larger than life, you know, John Wayne, but not. He was a very loving man, his heart was much larger than Johns. Confident in who he was, a loving father, really enjoyed Gods creation, and life. A great role model for me, of how I want to be as a man. I will love him always.
